NSU-COMPLEX: NAZI GERMAN UNDERGROUND

90' (ENG, GER), 3 × 45', 60' (GER)

The NSU-Complex tells the story of the National Socialist Underground.

In 1998, intelligence agents followed three young neo-Nazis – two men and a woman – to a garage where they were assembling pipe bombs. But before the police could arrest the suspects, they vanished into thin air. At that time, the three fugitives were barely 20 years old and had neither money nor passports. Yet, they founded the most lethal German terror organization since World War II. 13 years after their disappearance, two were found dead in a burning camper and days later, the third member walked into a police station and turned herself in. With interviews from neo-Nazis, government informers, investigators and the head of the domestic secret service, this is the most coherent documentary of one of Germany's biggest political scandals.
