BEUYS

110' (GER, FRE, ENG subs)

Joseph Beuys – the visionary who described society as a great artwork to which everybody can contribute. He revolutionized art. Art was his total freedom.

He is the man with the hat, the felt, and the “fat corner”. His artistic stylings possessed a hint of controversy that extended into the social and political arena. Rooted in the concepts of humanism, social philosophy and anthroposophy, his work eroded the boundaries of art -Art beyond the canvas, Art as a social sculpture. Everybody is an artist. Through the lens of a congenial montage of archival sources we give an intimate look at a visionary.
