STEREOTYPES

10 x 30' (GER, FRE, ENG subs)

Europe has numerous stereotypes. However, is there any truth to any of them? Come explore the highly provocative world of stereotypes.

The Dutch are always stoned. All Italians live with their mothers. Germans have no sense of humour. The Swiss are always neutral. According to social psychology, a stereotype is any thought about specific types of individuals or a group of people that is widely adopted by the wider community. We travel through ten European countries to check on these clichés. The result: ten humorous portraits on the colourful diversity of Europe.
