NO EXIT - BUILDING WALLS IN AFRICA

45', 30' (GER, ENG subs)

European governments have come up with a new form of solution to the growing migratory flow: with the help of investments worth billions they have built a barrier that already stops refugees in Africa.

We travel through Mali and Niger on a search for clues along the new border wall that Europe has built across Africa. The journey begins in Mali, which is one of the most important transit countries for people from West Africa. The goal of the European governments: Refugees should be stopped on their way to Europe. In Mali and Niger, where with the help of investments worth billions, the security apparatus here is to be expanded to make the border impenetrable, we meet migrants, farmers and refugee helpers.
