

CURRENT AFFAIRS

AFTERMATH OF THE FINANCIAL CRISIS

45' (GER, ENG subs)

There were several warnings that predicted a crash. But greed was stronger. But still investors are longing for more income returns.

On September 15, 2008, agencies reported the collapse of US bank Lehman Brothers. It was the biggest bankruptcy the world has ever seen and had fatal consequences for the finance markets. In the end, banks around the world had to be rescued - by taxpayers' money. That should never happen again. What has become of those promises made by governments? Are the banks under control? Has the industry learned from the crisis?

Pictures © WDR

Original Title:	10 Jahre nach der Finanzkrise
Year:	2018
Produced by:	WDR

